

Marble Landscapes

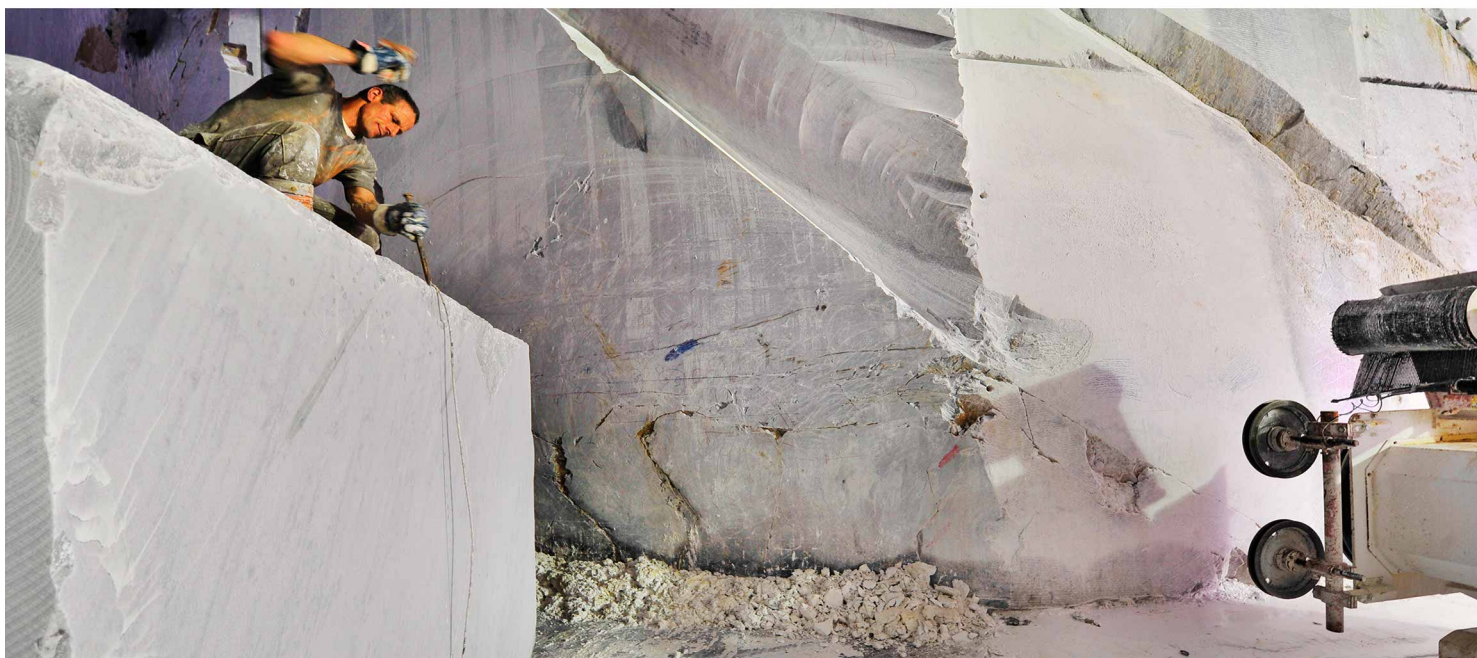

April

15-17

2016

During this Photo Workshop we'll retrace the marble path, with landscape shots of the whole area and with shots of work and workers, while quarrying and cutting the huge marble blocks.

We'll move through the quarries with a 4x4, going with a local geologist, who is also in charge on some building sites and expert on the territory, so that he'll be able to guide us through the several working situations and landscapes we'll be immersed into.

With a special permission we'll shoot the most renowned and historical artistic workshop in Carrara, trying to catch the atmosphere and every tiny detail of this charming workplace.

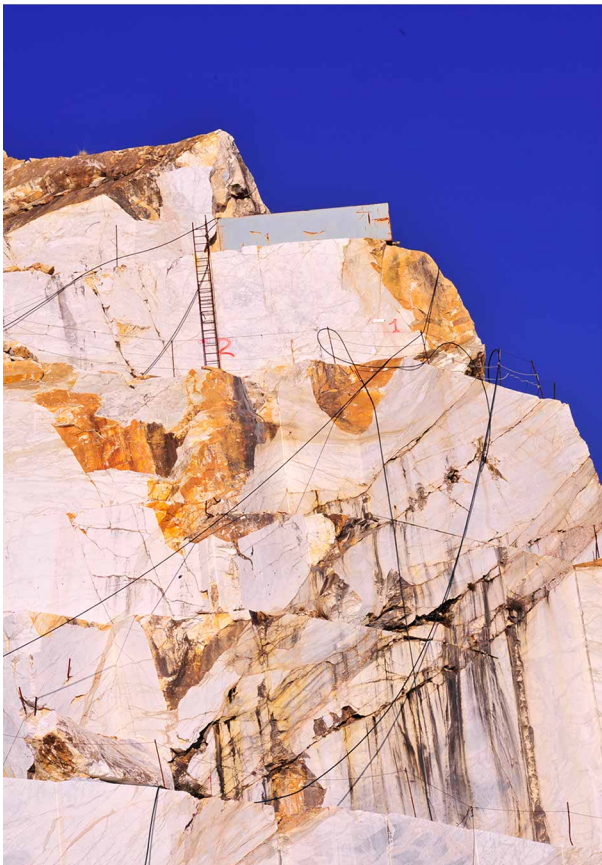

We could visit the small villages where quarry men live, pausing on thinking about their lives and their daily routine, together with the magnificent landscape around.

The Photo Workshop is starting on Friday April 15, with a meeting on Thursday 14 evening, at our Hotel and is ending on Subday 17, after a Photo Editing session, with selections of each photographer done during the workshop.

All of the shooting sessions will be followed by Sandro Santioli, and just for this reason the maximum number of participants is 10.

We'll go around with a careful eye, ready to catch the sense of the place and to recreate it. As usual I'll try to give you inputs towards a documentative and creative work at the same time.

I'll ask each photographer to develop his own photographic language, the critical sense and the ability to "see" and create brand new images.

The work made with the whole group will be very useful to compare and grow our work.

Photo Editing

The whole Sunday morning, last day of the Photo Workshop, will be dedicated to the Photo Editing of the works. For this purpose, each photographer will need to have his own laptop. We'll have the chance to understand our choices while clicking, so to enrich our view on reality.
